The basic principles of the game include throwing the ball, hitting the ball, and catching the ball. Of course, performing these three tasks is harder than it sounds, and it is this challenge that compels baseball players to play the game. In this article, we will explain the complex game of baseball, review some of the basic rules and equipment used and define the geography of a baseball field. Advertising Unlike most games, a running clock does not limit the duration of a baseball game. The two competing teams play in a period of innings, which are subdivided in half. Professional and college games are generally nine innings During the first half of each inning, the team bats visit and tries to score points, called runs, while the home team players take their respective defensive positions on the field. The goal of the defense is to get the players of the offensive team out in different ways. After recording three outs, the teams change - the offensive team moves to the defense, and the defensive team moves into attack. The hitting team sends one player at a time to try to hit the ball. The machine of the sport consists of two players - the pitcher and the batter. All All The action in a baseball game revolves around these two fighters. The pitcher stands on an elevated mound of dirt, called the pitcher's mound, which is 60 feet 6 inches (18.4 meters) from the home plate in Major League Baseball. The batter stands on either side of the home base, called the plate, holding a bat and facing the pitcher. To set the game in motion, the pitcher tries to throw the ball past the batter on the catcher's glove or make the batter hit the ball to put it in play. As the ball enters play, the eight fielders try to catch it or throw out the batter (more on that later), so they can't get to base and eventually score a point (a run). The goal of the batter is to put the ball in play so that the eight fielders can't catch the ball or throw it to another fielder to record one out. Now that you have a basic understanding of how the game works, let's take a deeper look at the baseball game, starting with the basic equipment. Baseball Sandwich Makes 6 to 8 servings Ingredients 1 (1-pound) round sourdough or white loaf of bread 2 cups mayonnaise, divided 1/4 pound thinly chopped roast beef 1 slice (about 1 ounce) provolone or Swiss cheese 3 tablespoons roasted red peppers, well drained 3 tablespoons spicy mustard, divided 1/4 pound thin slices of ham 1 slice (about 1 ounce) Cheddar cheese 3 tablespoons dill pickled slices 2 tablespoons thin slices onion Red color food Pastry bag and small writing tip Preparation Cut thin slice of bread. Set aside. With a serrated knife, cut around the sides of bread, leaving 1/4-inch-thick bread shell. Lift the central part of the bread; horizontally cut removed bread round into 3 slices of equal thickness. Spread 1 tablespoon of mayonnaise on the bottom of the honeyed loaf outside; top with layers of roast beef and provolone cheese. Cover with the bottom slice of bread and the red peppers. Spread the middle slice of bread over half the mustard, place over peppers. Top with layers of ham and Cheddar cheese. Spread the remaining slice of bread with the remaining mustard, place over ham and Cheddar cheese. Top with pickles and onion. Replace the top of the loaf of bread. Reserve 1/3 cup mayonnaise. Set aside. Frost out of whole loaf of bread with the rest of the mayonnaise. Tint preserved 1/3 cup mayonnaise with red food color; spoon into pastry bag installed with writing tip. Tube red mayonnaise onto the bread to look like stitches in baseball.
